

Timothy Tottles Terrific Crocodiles

No Timothy, a snack will ruin your supper. Go and play! Your father will be home soon and then well eat, Timothys mother says sending him out of the kitchen. Bored and hungry, Timothy throws himself down on the sofa where he begins to imagine the carpet turning into swirling blue water and the toys into hungry green crocodiles. Were so hungry, so very hungry! We cant wait for our supper! If only there was a little boy to eat! We cant wait for our supper! the crocodiles say as they swim in circles around the sofa. Timothy starts a mad dash leaping from sofa to chair to escape their teeth and long tails whipping to and fro, as he waits for his own dinner to be served. Written by research psychologist Anne Speckhard, Ph.D., Timothy Tottles Terrific Crocodiles addresses childrens use of playful use of thoughts to deal with normal daily frustrations. Humor and imagination help Timothy wait for his supper. Touching illustrations by New York Citys emerging artist, Jessica Speckhard, demonstrate the creativity of imagination. Timothy Tottles Terrific Crocodiles is the second in the series of Timothy Tottles Amazing Adventures, published by Little Fingertips Press, an imprint of Advances Press, LLC.
